Interior Arrangements. The house had a very spacious hall drawing and music rooms and a beautiful dining room on the main floor, with the kitchen facilities in the rear. Every room was richly adorned with the best that money could buy. Fine rugs covered the highly polished hardwood floors, valuable pictures hung on the wills, and, in fact, Mr. Bryant had so many choice engravings and oil paintings that, as big as his house was, it was difficult usually for him to find room to display a new pu chase. Many of the doors and other parts of the wood-work were bought in New York from old Broadway mansions, torn down when business invaded that thoroughfare, and many of these had not only substantial beauty, but had historic interests which made them doubly valuable to their owner. The library was the most valued part of the house in its owner's estimation, whose tastes continually led him to purchase rare old books and any and everything that would make his collection of literary treasures more complete. On the top of the house there was a large conservatory.

Four Washingtonians Charged With Crime of Arson.

Special Dispatch to The Evening Star. ROCKVILLE, Md., March 29.-Granville S Shaw a well-known builder of Washington, and three other prominent Washington business men were jointly indicted by the grand jury which has just adjourned here for arson. They are charged with having burned the handsome stone mansion on the farm of the late C. O. B. Bryant, at Four Corners, this county, about three miles from the District of Columbia line. The fire occurred in September, 1897. The property was insured in ten different companies, the total amount of the insurance being $27,000. Owing to suspicious circumstances surrounding the destruction of the building payment of the insurance was withheld for a long time, but a compromise was finally effected by which the sum of $22,500 was paid to John H. Walter, a real estate man of Washington, and Thomas H. Pickford, a Washington grocer,

Several months ago State's Attorney Talbott received information which caused him to begin an investigation. The result was that the recent grand jury returned a true bill, jointly charging Granville S. Shaw, John H. Walter, Thomas H. Pickford and Aaron Bradshaw, the last mentioned also of Washington, with the offense mentioned. Several days ago a requisition was obtained from Gov. Smith, and last night Sheriff Williams went to Washington to make the

The defendants will be brought to Rockville and State's Attorney Talbott will make an effort to have them tried at the term of court now in session. The indictment, it is said, was found upon the testimony of a Washington mechanic, who was employed on the building at the time.

RESULT OF INQUIRY.

Electric Railway Men Dismissed on Account of Recent Collision. As a result of the collision which occurred Monday morning last between two trolley trains on the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon railroad near Addison Heights, Conductor J. A. Brawner and Motorman Edward Atwell, who were running south-bound train No. 209, and Motorman Walter Beattle, who was in the cab of north-bound train No. 106, the two trains which were wrecked, have been dismissed from the service of the company. Conductor Benjamin Whaley, who was in charge of the north-bound train, was exonerated from blame, and, it is understood, The crews of both trains were suspended immediately after the accident, pending an investigation, by the officials of the company. Yesterday afternoon the conductors and motormen were notified to report at the main office, corner of 13½ street and Pennsylvania avenue in this city, and about 5 o'clock Superintendent Calvin announced the decision of the officials.

It is said the finding of the investigating board was that the south-bound train was behind time, and that, therefore, the motorman and conductor of this train were in fault. The board concluded that the northbound train was running on schedule time. held that Conductor Whaley acted properly in permitting his train to pass siding No. 8. The same considerations, however, did not experience Motorman Beattle, in the opinion of the officials. The adverse action in his case, it is understood, was founded on the claim that he should have used judgment in slowing his motor when he passed the siding, taking into account the heavy fog and the possibility of colliding with the approaching train from Wash-

OBJECTIONS TO MAKING HIM

BRIGADIER GENERAL. It is Believed by Some, However,

That the Appointment Will Be Made by the President.

The question as to how General Funston shall be rewarded for his valuable services in capturing the head and front of the Philippine insurrection continues to he widely discussed in official military circles. In view of General MacArthur's specific recommendation, indorsed by General Wheaton, that General Funston be appointed a brigadier general in the regular army, and the almost universal demand on the part of the people of the United States to the same effect, it is regarded as hardly conceivable that President McKinley would offer him a less dignified posi-

At the same time it is true that some officers of the regular army think that such an appointment would be out of proportion to the services rendered by the gallant Kansas volunteer. That opinion is predicated on the theory that the difficulties of aggerated, and that, in fact, the insurgent chieftain willingly contributed to that end. Notwithstanding these efforts to minimize funston's achievement, there seems to be no doubt in well-informed quarters that the President will promptly meet the popular demand in this matter and appoint Gen. funston to one of the existing vacancies in the list of brigadier generals.

Objections to the Appointment. The only objection made to such action was that it would shut out all officers of the army below the grade of brigadier general from possible appointment to the head of the army. It was stated that that condition of affairs would be due to the possibility that General Funston might have command of the army until after all his present military associates had retired for age. Although such a contingency is pos-sible, it is extremely improbable. In case of his appointment Funston would be the youngest general officer in the army, and if promotions were made by seniority would eventually become the lieutenant general and hold that office for many years.

But the fact is that the promotion of all general officers is made by selection. Ungeneral officers and is not even confined to he army in making them. Although a brigadier general would naturally be se lected for promotion to a vacancy in the list of major generals, the President might, if he chose, appoint a civilian or any of-ficer of the army, regardless of his rank. The same wide range of selection applies also to the lieutenant generalcy, notwithstanding the popular impression that the senior major general is legally entitled to the promotion. The President's wide discretion in such appointments was recently illustrated in the cases of Generals Chaf-fee, Wood and Bell, all of whom were umped over many of their seniors in the

The Command of the Army. There was nothing obligatory in the apcintment of General Miles to the command of the army. If the President had so preerred, he might have placed Generals Otis, Brooke or any other officer in command of he army. It therefore appears that General Funston's appointment as a brigadier eneral would not necessarily mean his enforced promotion to the head of the army in consequence of the retirement of officers ow his superiors in rank. Whether his advancement would be slow or rapid would depend altogether upon the wishes of the chief executive, and while Aguinaldo's captor might soon reach the exalted grade of lieutenant general, it is equally possible that he might never reach that grade, and, in fact, never be promoted above the grade of brigadier general. His future military advancement would der altogether upon the views of the chief exmanner that will fully recognize his great ecutive as to his fitness for increased rank and meritorious services." and the necessities of the service.

German Manufacturers Want Increas-

From the tone of the German press it appears that almost all branches of German industries are using their influence to procure an increase in the tariff rates, according to a report from United States Consul Schumann at Mainz to the Department of State. GENERAL MARKET REPORTS

Special Dispatch to The Evening Star.

NEW YORK, March 29.—Opening prices this morning were excited and irregular. Burlington sold up sharply for a gain of 4 per cent and the general list held well at fractional gains. Early in the day and before the opening of business predictions were freely made that Burlington would sell at 175.

A nervous short interest covered hurriedly, and recent buyers of the stock continued to increase their holdings up to the new high level. Northern Pacific Issues were in demand also and the Northwestern deal was more generally believed than

There was no official announcement, but Boston holders of Burlington were said to be receding from their opposition to the be receding from their opposition to the deal and that an early amicable arrangement would be reached, Erie, the eastern link in the proposed amalgamation, was given support, but failed to make any noteworthy advance during the period of greatest buoyancy in the Northwestern issues. The buying of the coal stocks was an important reature of the day. The miners' conference failed to cause any concern, since it is generally understood that a strike will be averted.

Delaware and Hudson advanced substantially under a higherman which research tially under a big demand, which was ac-companied with the usual rumors of a New York Central lease, Lackawanna advanced beyond 214, the highest price yet recorded, and an early distribution of its splendid surplus was rumored.

All the lower-priced coal shares were firm in sympathy with the advance in the stocks named

Western Union was bought in round amounts by the pool, and responded easily to the demand. Around 95 there was con-siderable realizing, but the price was forced vell beyond that limit later in the day. There is apparently no new development upon which to base the movement, the increased dividend rumor being put down to poard room imagination. The inside pool is advancing the stock because as a 5 per cent dividend payer it has not been suffi-ciently exploited in this market. The steel stocks were strong and made new price records as well as new friends.

The new securities are being well handled and the older ones, not included in the combination, are attracting a good de-mand, because of their excellent prospects. Colorado Fuel and Republic Steel Preferred gave evidences of accumulation. Sugar was week for a time under the influence of rumors indicating a less satisfactory trade

The traction shares and People's Gas advanced under buying which reflected a considerable covering of short contracts. The banks have lost about $4,000,000 in cash during the week, all of it practically

This would seem to foreshadow an un-favorable bank statement tomorrow, but the loan account may help matters slightly. As an evidence that there is no concern over the outlook for money the stock mar-ket continued buoyant right up to the last few minutes of business. The buying of the high-priced issues, as well as a few specialties, was of the best.
